How to request an NFR / Evaluation License via Tungsten Sales Support

Solution

Not-for-Resale (NFR) Software may be requested by partners for their internal, limited use. NFR software can be used at partner training facilities and briefing centers to demonstrate product functionality to prospects and customers or train partner employees.

Evaluation copies of software (EVAL) are intended for potential end users who are not Tungsten Automation partners. EVAL software may be implemented in customer environments and is intended as a tool for customers to determine whether the Tungsten Automation solution suits their business requirements. EVALs are not to be used for production purposes and may contain watermarks, volume caps, or other limitations that would make them unsuitable for production deployment. The license is intended for evaluation purposes in customer-facing environments in a pre-sale situation and may NOT, under any circumstances, be used for customer project development work that is subsequently intended for use in a production environment.
